

Challenges Facing Mothers to Protect the Children from Misguided Ideas at social media

Farah Ali Alshehri¹, Layan Mohammed Al Manea², Asma Thamer Alenazy³

Princess Norah Bint Abdul Rahman University

Abstract

This study tackles the topic of challenges facing mothers to protect the children from misguided ideas at social media, throughout reaching at the following objectives:

- Defining social challenges facing mothers to protect the children from social media.
- Defining psychological challenges facing mothers to protect the children from social media.
- Defining the pedagogical challenges facing mothers to protect the children from social media.
- Defining the most important suggestions to protect children from social media.

The study was used the questionnaire to gather data, and this questionnaire was directed to children`s mothers at Saudi society. To reaching this objective, the researchers have depended on using the analytical descriptive methodology, as coinciding with the nature of study. The questionnaire was prepared as a tool to gather data, submitting to specialist arbitrators, and distributing after amending on random study sample, from the mothers at Saudi society in Riyadh city. In addition, the proper statistical means were used throughout using SPSS.

The study was concluded that many of results are as the followings:

1. The mothers agreed that it must occupy the child, within leisure, with tasks developing his-her skills, whereas referring to the highest relative weight 92.4
2. The majority of mothers noticed that the mother tongue for children, is mixed with foreign language watching at social media and the relative weight refers to 69.8
3. The mothers agreed that the communication is less than between her and her child, due to social media, whereas the relative weight refers to 67.2.

4. The majority of mothers agreed that their children become more irritable, whereas the relative weight refers to 78.2

The most recommendations of study are as the followings:

1. The researchers and postgraduate students will benefit by this study to reach at more suggestions, which limiting the challenges facing the families and mothers to protect misguided ideas published by social media.
2. Directing to social workers, who are working at the school field and pioneers of student activities with the importance of reinforcing the awareness and protective programs for students about the risks of misguided ideas published by social media.
3. The family guidance centers shall benefit by this study to awareness Saudi families from risks of misguided ideas, which published by social media.

Keywords: Children, Misguided Idea, Mothers, Protection, social media, Challenges